KRAO.

The Child Who has Puzzled the Anthropologists.

Krao, that most remarkable and interesting little human creature, who has excited so much curiosity and provoked so much discussion in medical and scientific circles, is not to be classed in the category of ordinary dime museum attractions. She is not a natural " freak " as that term is often used in the show business, nor is she a monstrosity or a child unfortunately marked at birth. Peculiar as she is, she is, nevertheless, a member of the human family, and a good representation of the race to which she belongs—a race concerning which anthropologists have as yet but little knowledge.

She was discovered by Farini during one of his explorations, and was by him taken to England and Germany, and later sent to this country. The disciples of Darwin claim that she is " the missing link " for which the great scientist sought, or, at least, that she is a strong argument in favor of the Darwinian theory of the descent of man. Aside from the scientific value which she may have to anthropologists in assisting to determine the relations of man to the other mammals, she is a natural curiosity which may well excite the wonder of the average man or woman.

She is about eight years of age, small of stature and frame, of a kindly disposition and possessed of singular intelligence. Her face, while it is decidedly not handsome, is not by any means repulsive. Her eyes are large, dark and lustrous, the nose is flattened, the nostrils showing but slightly, and the cheeks are fat and of unusual elasticity.

On the inside of the cheeks are pouches, in which the child hides nuts or any other article of food. In these singular details she can keep any small object until she requires to use it. Her chief peculiarity is her strong and abundant hair.

Her head is covered with thick, strong, black hair, which grows down on her forehead and joins her heavy eyebrows.

and continues down her face in a form somewhat smoother and of finer texture. The shoulders and arms are also covered with a growth of hair from an inch to an inch and a half in length.

The legs and upper part of the feet are also provided with a similar coating. The manner in which the hair grows down, or rather, across the back, is very suggestive of an ape. She has also, it is said, a slight lengthening of the vertebral, suggestive of a caudal appendage. The formation of the muscles of the body are very peculiar, and have also given rise to considerable discussion.

In her native country she lived in trees, and did not know there was such a thing as fire, but so great is her adaptability to circumstances that she now demands all the necessities of modern civilized life, and many of the luxuries as well.—Boston Herald.

INDIAN MOUNDS.

Many of Them of Comparatively Modern Origin.

Dr. Cyrus Thomas, who is in charge of the division on mound exploration of the Bureau of Ethnology, has in the past three years obtained about 15,000 specimens of the handiwork of the mound builders, the study of which, with the survey of the mounds themselves and their surroundings, is gradually leading to a solution of certain archaeological riddles which a few years ago seemed insolvable.

While some of the mounds are doubtless very ancient, others similar in character and equally interesting have certainly been built up since the advent of Europeans.

A string of sleigh bells much corroded, but still capable of tinkling, was found among the flint and bone implements in a mound in Tennessee, while in Mississippi, at the point where De Soto is supposed to have landed, a Spanish coat-of-arms in silver, one blade of a pair of scissors and other articles of European manufacture were found in positions that indicated that they were buried by the original builders of the mounds.

In a Georgia mound two copper plates were found, upon which were stamped figures resembling the sculptures upon the Central American ruins. The workmanship is vastly superior to that displayed in the articles of pottery, stone and bone found in the mounds, and their origin and purpose are not yet explainable.

Aside from these plates nothing has been found to indicate a connection between the mound builders and the Aztecs or the Pueblos, while on the other hand there appear many reasons for not going beyond the Cherokees and their fellow red men of the Ohio and Mississippi valley to find the origin of these curious creations.

The purpose of the mounds still remains in some cases a mystery, but in others they are known to have been made sometimes for burial places, and sometimes as foundations for Indian villages, secure from the floods to which the lowlands were periodically subjected.

The famous " elephant " mound which has long been a bone of contention among ethnologists, and which in the opinion of some proved that the mound builders were coexistent with the elephant upon this continent, appears by the latest and most careful survey to have no trunk at all.

Earlier surveys, compared with each other, show the trunk in widely different positions, which leads to the inference that if the mound was not entirely imaginary it was never anything more than a sand-hill piled up and shifted about by the wind. Without the trunk the mound bore as much resemblance to the fox as to an elephant.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

The hair is frequently rendered prematurely gray by care, grief, delicate health, lowness of spirits, or a depressed tone of the vital powers. The use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer will restore its youthful color and beauty.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. George V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: " My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at 2.

—A thorough trial will give positive proof of this.

Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave.

J. W. MORRIS, Buffalo, Oct. 1, 1881.

Poverty and Suffering.

" I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. I know it."
